SEC Disclosure to Issuers Notification

It is the policy of J.P. Morgan Clearing Corp. (together with all affiliated companies, "JP Morgan") to protect the confidentiality of customer information. However, the law requires JP Morgan, upon an issuer's request, to provide the names, addresses and securities positions of customers who are beneficial owners of the issuer's common stock and who have not objected to disclosure of such information.

Under SEC rules, you have the right to decide whether you want information about your account and your security holdings disclosed to all the companies in which you have positions in common stock or whether you wish to have this information kept confidential. These rules provide, however, that if you do not specifically object to such disclosure, you will be deemed to have consented to disclosure and JP Morgan will be required to release such information to the companies requesting it.

Election to Prevent Disclosure to Issuers (Optional):

By signing below,

1. You elect to prevent the disclosure of your name, address and securities positions to all the companies in which you own securities that are being held for you by JP Morgan for any account(s) with the account title specified at the top of this form.
2. You represent and warrant that you are the primary account owner(s), holder(s), trustee(s), executor(s), and/or authorized agent(s) for any account(s) with the account title specified at the top of this form.
